Adobe's visual learning center In Photoshop, the object layer is where objects are combined and edited. The background is done using the Channels palette. The Layer panel provides you with control over the layers. You can do just about anything from moving, grouping, or adjusting a layer's opacity to cropping, aligning, rotating, and resizing a layer. There are many ways to manipulate the layers, one of which is actually a process called layering. A layer is basically just a group of objects that will be combined together with each other. It can be any type of graphic, like a line, color, shape, or texture. Layers are organized into stacks. These stacks are spaces where you can see a preview of your entire layer or stack. To open a stack, place your mouse in the stack's preview window. From here, you can manipulate the elements in the stack as you normally would. They will appear when you place your mouse over the stack's preview window. To remove a layer, click the eye icon in the Layers panel or from the menu bar. Alternatively, you can double-click a layer to show its layers. For a quick way to remove all layers, choose Layer > Unlock All Layers. Keep in mind that layers can be very slow to change; usually, the layer you want to edit will be one of the top layers. You should usually not edit a layer or stack that is part of your project's background unless it is a background layer. Using the Layers panel, you can add, move, and alter layers to create layers and stacks that can be used in your project. You can move a layer to any stack in the Layers panel by clicking the arrow that appears next to the stack after you have moved a layer into it. If the layer is part of your project, you can click the New Layer button to make another layer. This dialogue box tells you where it is looking to copy or save your file. You should check this box before saving your file; otherwise, your file will not be saved to the folder indicated. If you do not check this

Dont'a Hightower Dont'a Hightower (born October 5, 1993) is an American football linebacker for the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League (NFL). He played college football at Alabama, where he was recognized as the 2012 national defensive player of the year. Hightower was drafted by the Patriots in the first round of the 2015 NFL Draft. Early years Hightower attended Miles Monroe High School in Monroe, Louisiana. He played wide receiver, running back, and defensive back for the Miles Monroe Knights high school football team. He finished his career with 1,854 receiving yards, 3,653 rushing yards, and 547 total tackles. Hightower was ranked as the nation's No. 6 defensive back and top-10 recruit by ESPN's Michael Irvin. He was named a McDonald's All-American, and 247Sports.com ranked him as the nation's No. 29 overall prospect. Hightower also played basketball, helping the Knights to back-to-back state championships during his senior season. College career Hightower originally signed with the University of Southern Mississippi to play college football for the Southern Miss Golden Eagles. After realizing he did not fit into the scheme, he left the team to transfer to the University of Alabama. Hightower enrolled in the University of Alabama and played for the Crimson Tide from 2012 to 2014. He decided to end his college career after the 2014 season. As a sophomore, Hightower started all 13 games at strongside linebacker and registered a career-high 145 total tackles and eight tackles for a loss. He received second-team All-Southeastern Conference (SEC) honors as a sophomore. Hightower was named the winner of the 2012 Bronko Nagurski Trophy after he led the nation in tackles, finished second in the nation in tackles per game, and was fourth in tackles. He also finished second in the nation in sacks with 5.5, and was third in tackles for a loss with 12. He was one of 10 finalists for the Dick Butkus Award, finishing third behind Jameis Winston and Calvin Pryor. Hightower finished the season with 137 tackles, 13.5 tackles for a loss, eight sacks, three forced fumbles, and two fumble recoveries. After the season, he was recognized as the 2012 national defensive player of the year by the Maxwell Football Club. As a junior in 2013, Hightower was named a finalist
