Comments by other users. About the purchase This represents a fairly easy purchase. There are lots of items available as one-day-delivery, and at items with various conditions. All of them are at the very least the seller's partial positive feedback. About the seller A2K is the organisation responsible for the auctions. Their combined traffic is around one million items per year, nearly all of which is 0-day-delivery items. They do not often bring in contracts, and they don't do any trading whatsoever. All items offered are exclusive, new undamaged items from the closed alts of 3rd and 4th generation players. All deals are exclusively based on the condition of the items. Physical stores are available in multiple countries, and online in two more ones. Currently, there are 50,120 feedback that show positive feedback (excepting deleted feedback, ) and 3,210 feedback for A2K, of which only 981 shows positive. The picture is a bit skewed due to feedback provided by long-running agents. About this item This is one of the craziest item rolls I have ever seen, though it has been offered now more than a week in a row: an unconfirmed and unadvertised player named Taylor "Tigerfighter" Pandemee cheated his way to three different seasons, used three different accounts, stole one of his drop experience per "season" and bragged about it on a Twitch stream. I wrote about it in the post I made 7 hours ago - and I still didn't add GIFs here, because meh. I couldn't pin down his location and timezone due to the fact that events could happen at any time, but because he bragged about them on a twitch stream, I was able to identify his place of business as "A*mazing Gaming". He was certainly watching the auction when he rose to being the most active bidder: at 3:05AM KST, he bid on the most expensive item to "buy" and secured it (not "own," but who cares). He has been at it, in fact, since his first active bid - back then, 2:40 AM KST, he bid on the second highest ticket. He apparently lined up his accounts, because at the end of the auction, they had almost a won and locked amount of experience (from those three "seasons") at the
