What's new in Knee Deep:

and Other Stories The Testament of Sherlock Holmes and Other Stories (also released as The Mystic Murders in North America) is a collection of short stories written in collaboration with John Dickson Carr and first published in 1923 by George Harrap. The nineteen stories originally appeared in twenty-seven issues of the weekly story paper Black Mask through October 12, 1921. In this collection Carr and Dickson bring their trademark mysteries into the religious setting, featuring Reverend Sherlock Holmes in such cases as "The Dead Count." "The Cardboard Crown" focuses on the persecution of the Protestant minority in Roman Catholic-dominated Colombia. "The Death Dance" focuses on a witch hunt occurring in South Africa. In April 1923 Harrap published a companion volume for the collection, A Study in Scarlet and Other Stories, with a cover illustration by Arthur Rackham. Contents "A Study in Scarlet" "The Cardboard Crown" "The Black Mask Murder" "The Prism's Image" "The House on Hong Kong Street" "The County Visitation" "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" "The Mystery of the Stolen Necklace" "The Dead Count" "The Bagatelle of the Blue Train" "The Cardinal's Blanket" "The Moonstone Murder" "The Boy in the Attic" "The Persian's Tale" "A False Clue" "The Burning Tide" "The Servants of the Dragon" "The Red-Headed League" "The Mystery of the Fat Lady and Her Statement" "The Death Dance" "The Case of the Captain's Diamonds" "The Mystery of the Maharanis"

After getting his hands on a mysterious book, young gamer Dave Akers is kidnapped by a faceless organization that turns him into an unstoppable killing machine, using his rage to commit gruesome acts of mayhem. With his best friends left to fend for themselves, Dave has only one thing to live for: killing and taking over as leader of the group! A collection of ten retro-style puzzle game levels from the 1980s and 1990s, inspired by classic shmup games and by classic video games in general. Dependent on the type of game, they can be very difficult, very challenging, or they might just be ridiculously simple. If you're not used to old pixel art, then you might give up early. But if you find a challenge that you can overcome, there might be a road to higher achievements to unlock. Biome: Crash looks to be a real time take on the genre, and I loved the demo I played back in the fall. The player is an alien stranded on Earth who must find a way to survive while using just a few items. With nothing else, it makes for a fun and compelling watch. It's all about your ability to use your environment and a toolbox of items to craft a strategy that can bring you to victory. The Revenant: Retribution is a new case-based game by Vivid Games where you play as an agent of justice who has to beat a series of three-stage investigations. You can do this alone or in cooperative local co-op. I played this a while back and loved it. It's a fun arcade-style shooter. The title's hard to get, but you can get it by using the $5 Steam-to-Steam code you get by paying $5 on Steam to this developer. It's fair to say that a lot of classic FPS games have been remasters recently. The recent releases such as DOOM 4 and Wolfenstein II: The New Colossus all have major improvements to graphical and other technical stuff, and make great recommendations if you're a fan of classic gaming. To me, the first game on this list, Day of the Tentacle
