What's new:

, number one Reed lives next door. In his room, hidden behind a stack of shoe boxes, he sleeps. In his room, decorated in the same style as Reed's, another boy, identical to him but slightly taller, sleeps. "An increased level of head-wound activity, however, becomes accompanied by a large quantity of discreet but unspecific increases in daytime activity," Reed is saying. "Self-monitoring confers invisibility, destroys speech, and causes other illnesses; it is complicated by intermittent access to the rear of the closet, which is difficult to enter because of the seated position of the person within...." I am driving my car through a forest. I am thinking of Reed's Neighborhood, or the adjoining one. I am thinking of how we would be going about storing the same, as part of a potential incriminating message. "This conduct very likely involves... altruism," Reed is saying. "Dr. Greenberg's interviews show a considerable degree of unhappiness which attempts to provide the feeling of security that being of help extends in proving one's self worth to others and restores the virtuous impulse toward altruism...." "Personality distortions of this kind," he says, "are accomplished by demanding and winning attention through junk talk...." "Undelayable, intermittently bursting, stuttering interpersonal communication uttered at a high pitch," he says, "induced by movement of incompatible limbs, the resulting overpowering sensation of rebounding off the ceiling and floor." I am stopping the car in the middle of a grocery store parking lot. Reed is sitting on top of the box. The other boy is sitting on top of the box behind him. The radio is playing. The cars are honking behind us. Inside the supermarket, shoppers are pushing carts and grabbing shopping lists. In front of us, a kid is leaning a glove on a door handle in a way that feels like a declaration of love. "It remains our impression,"

Reed is saying, "that... the closest merely verbal anamnestic equivalent would be... misfired communication as... aggression." "Cyclor, however," he says, "is a wider term. It comprehends many of our anamneses in a single group which we call... reactors. In the maturation process, certain people are elect to show on the clinical scene a tendency not only to self-regulate, exculpate, and project on others a variety of self-defeating and destructive qualities... but to also avail themselves of the
