In the case at bar, the insurance company not only had the duty of investigating the insured automobile and to ascertain that the vehicle was "insured", but it had the burden of proving that the insured automobile was being used with its permission at the time of the accident. Under the terms of an automobile insurance policy, "the insured automobile" is defined as "that automobile which is described in the declarations as an automobile which is described in the policy issued to the named insured as the automobile for which a premium charge is shown in the declarations and which is principally garaged at the described premises." (In accord, LaBarre v. Ohio Farmers Ins. Co., 360 Mich. 452.) The statute refers to "coverage" of the insured automobile and the policy is said to reference "such insurance." Nothing in the construction of the statute or
