AutoCAD LT 2012 or. xforce keygen 2014 and AutoCAD LT 2013-2017.Q: GDB and "halt" command I was wondering if it was possible to use GDB's "halt" command in the course of debugging a program, so I issued the command: gdb -q./a.out halt And it seems the program is halted. How can I see more details of what's going on, i.e. exit code, etc? I have tried "info registers", "info locals", "info breakpoints" with no luck... A: You are likely getting a SIGKILL (which is usually a default for SIGTERM). Did you give gdb a proper signal to hang on to? gdb is supposed to take care of the SIGTERM, SIGINT, SIGQUIT and SIGKILL and deliver the signal to the process. You need to tell gdb to hang on to the signals. Add this to your gdb script: while : # Whatever you want to do here # When you're ready to break, type 'c' break Note that if you don't do this, your program will run until the operating system runs out of patience and kills your process. Q: Card flip and show text I want to flip a card based on the text. When I click "Button 1", the card flip and the text should be visible. When I click "Button 2", the card flip and the text should be hidden. Below is the HTML code. How can I make this happen? HTML: Content
