The Snap Camera is working fine through Skype for Business (16.Q: How to remove all HTML tags from an ArrayList object in Java? Having an ArrayList in my program, I'm trying to remove all the HTML tags from it. I have been searching all over the place and could not find the right answer: I need to do this without using regex patterns or containing the exact tags in my list. This is what I have at the moment.

final ArrayList myList = new ArrayList(); . . . // What I need to do is: // Remove all the HTML tags from myList final HTML parser = new HTML(); myList = parser.execute(xml);

The above is just for example, because I cannot edit the XML format I need to work with at the moment, so the tag class is what I need to consider. How can I do it? A: Use an `HTMLDocument`. final Document document = builder.parse(""); final org.w3c.dom.Document doc = (org.w3c.dom.Document) document; final List nodes = doc.getElementsByTagName("a"); // will print: nodes = [] A: You could use an `XmlSerializer`. This'll let you cast the list as a type of `XObject`, which would look something like this:

public class XObject { private String value; public XObject(String value) { this.value = value; } public String getValue() { return this.value; } }

The keys should be the names of the tags you want to be stripped of their HTML.
