new from adobe: photoshop cc 2019. after finishing my photoshop talk at scgcon, i started giving photoshop a shot. i just downloaded photoshop cc 2019, and i haven't taken it for a spin yet (although i'm not too worried, as i'm not sure how much of a difference photoshop has made in the last few years). by default, in the cloud services or connected web apps panel of your firestarter account, you can manage your services and the api keys for popular services. the marketplace is where you can search, see what's being offered, and even buy apps directly from the marketplace that are compatible with your firestarter home assistant setup. the new version comes in two different flavors: single threaded and multi-threaded. this may mean more speed or more comfort, depending on your needs. you can see what happens when you "publish" or "unpublish" a module by viewing the details. there are two "edition" fields: original and test. this means the author has created their module for the original edition (oe) of the game. if you try to install the module with the test edition (te), you'll get an error. there are two editions available in the 1.3 series: standard and deluxe. the deluxe edition is the fan-favorite, since it includes new units, structures, and buildings. the problem is that it also contains the bugfixes for many of the older content that was already in the standard edition. the deluxe edition is of no use to me, since i don't have a deluxe edition of the game (since it was never officially released in north america). however, it is available for sale from other european retailers. and for those of you who can get your hands on it, it comes with expansions that are currently available on steam for $25.
