They say you should never look for reasons to buy an expensive piece of software, but the same rule applies to not buying the newest version of software. Time and again, Adobe identifies software enhancements as a reason to buy new versions. If you don't read the manual, there are two places to move your mouse cursor to make Lightroom work – one in the title bar area and one in the side panel. I prefer the former, but that's a personal choice. It's a much more logical place to control the program.
