Peradanan di pasar tinggi The Film and Creative Industries office (FCI) in the Department for Business, Innovation and skills, set up in October 2018 .Macrosomia-related metabolic disturbances in pregnancy. The complications associated with pregnancy are directly related to an adequate maternal physiology. Macrosomia, defined as a birth weight above the 90th percentile for a given gestational age, is a major problem in pregnancy, increasing the risk of obstetric and perinatal complications. There is increasing evidence that the origin of these complications is a maternal metabolic derangement during pregnancy, affecting the fetus. The most common findings are maternal obesity, insulin resistance, dyslipidemia, and hypertension. Biochemical markers of oxidative stress, both in the mother and in the fetus, are increased. Insulin resistance is an important pathogenic mechanism in the etiology of pregnancy-associated macrosomia. In this review the authors analyze the pathophysiology of maternal obesity, insulin resistance, gestational diabetes, hypertension, and dyslipidemia and the consequences on the fetus, analyzing the role of macronutrients in the genesis of both gestational diabetes and hypertension. In conclusion, this systematic review shows that macrosomia is a multifactorial condition.
